Interacting with Invite Lists (Public Users)

Invite lists can be created for groups of office staff that will consistently be invited into a case.

Invite lists should be created per user role because the permissions for every person included in the invite list will default to the permissions for the role with the most restrictive permissions. For example, if Attorneys and Law Office Staff are included in the same invite list, the permissions for all users would default to the Law Office Staff permissions, which does not include the ability to invite others.

If a person is removed from an invite list, the person will not be automatically removed from the cases that the person had been invited into. To remove the person's access to cases (e.g., the person is no longer employed at the law firm), contact the clerk/court to have the person's user account deactivated.
